- During the open meeting, one of the board members must make a motion to close the meeting and disclose the purpose as allowed above. A vote of at least two-thirds of the members is required to close the meeting. The minutes for the open meeting must reflect the reasons for closing the meeting, the location of the closed meeting, and the vote, by name, of each member who voted for or against the motion to close the meeting.

- Any members of the public remaining are politely asked to exit so the board members can discuss the matter privately.

- A new recording for the closed session is started. The chair will announce the date, time, and place of the meeting, the names of members present, and the names of any others present (i.e. any person specifically invited by the board to attend and participate). The discussion during the closed session must be limited to the subject matter for which the meeting was closed. If the discussion wanders into other topics, the chair (or any member) should remind others to refrain from discussing other matters. No action may be taken during the closed session.

- A board member makes a motion to end the closed meeting. The recording is ended. The recording of the closed session is kept separate from the recording of the open meeting.
